fine example of the way a really good fighter can lose a reputation that it took him years to earn.

As a twenty-rounder or possibly no superiors. But as a sixund skirmisher he is a frost. There are, a few good finishers who can fight the short distance cleverist and speedily enough to be successful. One is Attell. Terry McGovern was good atlany distance in his time. Clever Jim Corbett was a first-class six-round but better in a finish fight, for he

B of the country boxer, and he isn't pretty to look at whech he is fighting. That's the reason that he is making a failure of this six-round business, and losing soid thunks of his Western reputation.

If Neison is wise he will drop a few of these small bouts, pack up his grip and Jump out to San Francisco, where he can keep an eye on Jimmy Britt and the big match. Jimmy is talking up a match with Hanton, and if that is once arreaged, good-by to Battling Nelson—for the present at least.

maich with Hanlon, and if that is once arranged, grood-by to Battling Nelsonfor the present at least.

OUNG CORBETT was beaten by Eddie Hanlon. That's ancient history by this time But there history by this time But there history by this time But there have a few things about the fight that may still be interesting.

Carbett showed that he isn't dead yet. Don't forget the fact that Hanlon isn't a second rater. He was good shough a couple of years ago to light found to history a youngster, less than eighteen years old, just beginning to guin a reputation that extended beyond the city limits of San Francisco. He is better now, and has much more experience of the ring and its trickery, fact corbett, who has fallen from his high estate during the past year or two, came back enough to give him so good an argument that the majority of spectators rooted for a "draw" designing.

GRAVESEND RACE TRACK, June 5.—Gravesend presented a most attractive card this afternoon, and it induced a very good "washday" crowd to visit the course. While the card was not overburdened with quality the fields were well matched and contests promised to be keen. The weather was fine and the track fast and the botting was brisk. There was a report that the racing associations contemplated reducing the admission fee to $2 for men and $1 for women, as it was before this meeting. To make up the loss of revenue which must naturally follow it is said that the bookmakers will be permitted to contribute each day the amount of overnight purses. No one in authority could verify this story. John G. Cavanagh, manager of the betting ring, said that any scheme which would reduce the expenses of the public would certainly meet with approval.

"get back." The defeat may dissourings him and cause him to start mother long period of dissipation. In that case—good-by, Young Corbett, Berlies.

If Corbett has real stuff in him this is the time when he will show it. He will take the reverse like a man, consinue to take core of himself, and in the next fight force his way up again against the odds that handlesp a beaten man. If he doesn't—well—there are allowed by Ella Snyder and Canten, They say the proof for the new ones.
